Joint Master in Global Economic Governance and Public Affairs

LUISS

Introduction

The Joint Master in Global Economic Governance and Public Affairs (GEGPA) is offered in partnership between the Luiss School of Government and the Centre International de Formation Européenne (CIFE). The program focuses on how to assess, manage and enhance private and public institutions' governance with a wide range of economic and digital intelligence tools. The one-year program includes terms in Rome, Berlin and Nice and is taught in English by renowned researchers and experienced professionals who combine practical expertise and academic credentials. It combines onsite teaching, case studies, consulting missions and a final research thesis.

Objectives

At the end of the program, graduates possess:

- a digital and sustainable economy-driven resume
Our students experience the digital economy in a global interdependent world and develop the analytical expertise necessary to govern economic institutions that strengthen individual opportunity, social cohesion and environmental stability
- expert feedback
Program participants hone their skills in governance and sustainable economic development with a hands-on thesis mentored by CIFE and Luiss experts as well as other seasoned policy leaders
- a global alumni community network
While studying, our students connect with CIFE and Luiss University's network of policy makers and diplomats while also accessing exclusive project opportunities in

European and international institutions
