

Joint Master in Global Economic Governance and Public Affairs

Luiss
School of Government

cfe Centre international de formation européenne

Introduction

The Joint Master in Global Economic Governance and Public Affairs (GEGPA) is offered in partnership between the Luiss School of Government and the Centre International de Formation Européenne (CIFE). The program focuses on how to assess, manage and enhance private and public institutions' governance with a wide range of economic and digital intelligence tools. The one-year program includes terms in Rome, Berlin and Nice and is taught in English by renowned researchers and experienced professionals who combine practical expertise and academic credentials. It combines on-site teaching, case studies, consulting missions and a final research thesis.

Objectives

At the end of the program, graduates possess:

- a digital and sustainable economy-driven resume
Our students experience the digital economy in a global interdependent world and develop the analytical expertise necessary to govern economic institutions that strengthen individual opportunity, social cohesion and environmental stability
- expert feedback
Program participants hone their skills in governance and sustainable economic development with a hands-on thesis mentored by CIFE and Luiss experts as well as other seasoned policy leaders
- a global alumni community network
While studying, our students connect with CIFE and Luiss University's network of policy makers and diplomats while also accessing exclusive project opportunities in European and international institutions

Program Description

ECTS: 60

Stretching over one academic year, the program is structured into four modules:

1. Global Governance at the Luiss School of Government in Rome:

Learn the context and challenges of economic governance and policy in the twenty-first century while attending the following courses:

- Democracy and Global Governance: Conceptual and Methodological Issues
- Global Dimensions of Democracy and Rule of Law
- Democratizations and Beyond
- International Public Policies

2. Sustainable Development, the Way Forward? at CIFE in Berlin:

Study new forms of transnational and interregional governance as a way forward towards sustainable development in the context of major climate and demographic changes by completing the following courses:

- Transnational Innovation
- Global and Local Regulation
- Interregional Innovation

3. Policy Intelligence at CIFE in Nice:

Investigate how far digital society enables transforming economic data into policy knowledge by studying:

- Cybergovernance

- Economic Indicators
- Global Risk Management

4. Applied research methodology, case studies, simulation exercises and skills workshops throughout the Rome, Berlin and Nice sessions:

Students participate in networking events with national and international government officials, private sector representatives and leading academics organized by the Luiss School of Government in Rome and by CIFE in Berlin and Nice. Students must also complete a final master's thesis.
