

Stefania Panebianco, PhD in International Relations, Associate Professor of Political Science, University of Catania, and Holder of the Jean Monnet Chair EUMedEA. Teaches Mediterranean Politics, Politics and Institutions in the Mediterranean, Institutions of Global Trade at the University of Catania. Since a.y. 2017/2018 teaches Migration Politics in the Mediterranean at LUISS-Rome. Visiting at IBEI, Barcelona, in 2019 and at GRITIM, University Pompeu Fabra, in 2022. Co-editor of Global Affairs. Published in IF journals such as Third World Quarterly, International Politics, Geopolitics, Contemporary Italian Politics, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, Italian Political Science Journal. Authored monographic books (Giuffré, EGEA, CASS) and edited books (Palgrave, Rubbettino, Frank Cass). Co-edited the Special Issue for International Politics ‘Shifting Borders of European (In)Securities: Human Security, Border (In)Security and Mobility in Security’ (2022).

Main research interests are migration politics in the Mediterranean, EU foreign policies, EU-MENA relations, EU and democracy promotion in the MENA area. Participates in the PROTECT H2020 research project, in the MORDOR Erasmus+ Cooperation Partnership on higher education and the EUNICE Education Alliance, all funded by the European Commission.

In the last 10 years she has served for SISIP, ECPR-SGIR, EISA, and is one of the EISA founding members. She has recently been elected as a member of the ECPR-SGEU Steering Committee.

1th September 2022